Pre conference workshop on: “Publishing Your Research in Impact Journals”

Publishing science is as important to the scientific process as designing, conducting, and analyzing the experiment itself. The process of writing a research paper is a rewarding experience in academics. Without publishing the scientific works, the researchers will not get the value of their hard work and effort. Publishing research article requires good writing skills along with the focus and proper knowledge about the journals guidelines and their scope. This workshop will focus on essential techniques for effective writing and presentation of scientific information and highlight some of the important issues related to publishing research works in journals with impact factor.
